G. W. Carter came on the steamer, and visited his brother, E. B. Carter, the 30th.

Albert Hobbs, who is attending school in the village, came home Saturday, sick with the measles.

O. W. H. Judkins and C. Haskell, blasted rocks on the road near Simon Richardson's, the 31st.

Memorial day! How many sad memories rush to my mind! I well remember the call to arms and how many of the young men that had been my school-mates enlisted. My own brothers were among the first to enlist. One was confined in Andersonville 11 months, where he suffered everything but death. A brother-in-law lost his life on the battlefield. It seemed to me the best and the brightest were the ones to go and never return. I recall one young man, who was studying for the ministry, Wesley J. Cummings, who gave up his bright prospects for his country's sake. His dust lies mouldering in a southern grave, unknown and unsung, but not unwept. The younger generation make a holiday of it, but to us who lived and suffered at that time, Memorial day seems like a funeral. Oh! cruel, cruel war.

Hats That Obstruct.

"Will the ladies please remove their hats?" would be a most welcome introductory sentence to a great many at the opening of a concert, at a church service or in any place where the speaker or singers are wished to be seen as well as heard.

If the wearers of these large hats as well as some who own these high creations would just stop and think how much space they cover and that those sitting back of them cannot see anything but "hat" they ought to be willing to sacrifice a little and remove them.

Then notice several women, girls sitting side by side, hats interlocked one with the other, what chance is there for those sitting back of this great "bank wall of hats" to see.

In some of the churches around Boston and in other places the ladies are requested to remove their hats and many hope that that same movement will continue to spread.

No doubt everyone would like the style of hats better and think them beautiful if they were not such an obstruction.

A World Language.

One May Come into Existence. Why a Language Dies.

In an essay on the inadequacy of speech, the inadequacy being that which has reference to the expression of ideas, not to the expression of emotions, Dr. Charles W. Sugar has pointed out that when a language (like Hebrew) has reached a stereotyped stage and the people speaking it continue to advance in thought there is nothing left but to discard it for another.

Maternus Aurelius, it may be remembered, felt that Greek was better adapted to give utterance to the inmost thought of his soul than his native Latin, and there are instances in our day of writers who have habitually expressed themselves in some language other than their mother tongue.

Ultimately, perhaps, there will be some world language capable of expressing the thoughts and compatible with the psychology and temperaments of all people.

Even now the term articulate speech includes many sounds that are not vocal. In fact, the large majority are only modifications of vocal utterance. The most peculiar of these occurs in the language of the Hottentots, who employ sounds produced by inspiration or by means of the air in the mouth. These sounds are four in number and have been described as the "interjection of annoyance on the part of the owner of a cow, the giving of a kiss and the sound of encouragement, 'ok,' to a tired horse." They can only be learned from the natives by direct communication, since it is impossible to represent them graphically as it is the howl of a lyena or the croak of a frog.

One writer has maintained that they are the bridge over the gulf between the speech of man and the cries of animals and the primeval utterances of the world language was developed. No one tongue employs all the sounds which the human voice is able to produce or even a majority.

The number for English is placed at about forty, but the number of all that are in use. Tuscan, Italian and Finnish, which are rich in vowels, employ few sounds, but Russian, with its weird combinations of consonants, employs many.—[London Post.

Most farmers are wasteful in the way they treat their farm harnesses and machinery. The costly harnesses are left out where the dust will settle on them; and how rarely are they cleaned. Saved away with machinery. A few drops of oil at the right time will save a lot of grinding in the bearings. ## "Old Ben Bolt"

By MYRA NORTHCLIFF.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

His name wasn't "Old Ben Bolt," but everybody called him that, and strangers accepted it on the spot as singularly appropriate, for Captain Jim Saybolt's honest, kind blue eyes, his brown face and closely curling hair, and his masterful yet good natured mouth made him indeed seem the embodiment of the famous "Ben Bolt of the salt sea gale."

He wasn't old at all, though he thought himself aged and beyond all the dreams of youth because he had just turned thirty-five. But then he had always had an abnormal modesty about his own masculine charms.

His head, albeit of pepper and salt, was filled with practical good sense that had brought him to his position as superintendent and part owner of the Grantson company's big fleet of smacks.

He had his office in the cubby of a water stilled shanty at the end of the pier, and its window looked directly across at a certain young woman named Kate, dealing out candy, oranges and cheap cigars to the rolling crews of the boats.

There was a standing joke among the boys how the smoking habit took hold of everybody after he saw Kate.

It never got to her ears, though, for notwithstanding the candy and cigars, there was a fine little line of reticence about the girl over which no one ever stepped, not even Hank Raynor, the vainest and most impudent fellow that ever trod a schooner's deck. But her pretty blushes and shining eyes gave the clew to her preference, and Raynor, who frequently consumed his entire wait buying a cigar, could not have been said to discourage the impression.

It is true the boys joked, but the majority of them swore as well, for the handsome Raynor bore no immaculate reputation among them.

"Cuss it!" said Dick Pearsall, mate of the Osprey schooner, savagely one night. "Why is it a woman can never see an inch from her nose when she's daffy on a man?"

"Marryin'" takes that out of 'em, though," laughed old Captain Brown, who was on honorable drydock after fifty years of cod and halibut.

"Marryin'" sneered the mate of the dandy Burgess built smack Lucinda V. "Marryin'! Raynor looks like a marryin' man, don't he? I ain't no masher myself, but I tell you that smart is just tryin' to show off before us fellows. Marry her! Even if he wanted to be ain't it to wipe her old shoes on!"

Nobody dissented. There were tongues in the fishing port that did not hesitate to declare that Raynor's skill as a fisherman was far inferior to the art with which he could wreck coasters for a living when the owners got tired of paying insurance and decided that it was time to collect some interest.

"All the same, he told me it was fixed up between 'em," insisted Captain Brown. "That's tellin', I s'pose; but he didn't say as there was anything private about it."

Unnoticed by the men, Captain Jim Saybolt had come up in time to catch the last words. He stopped a moment in the shadow of a column. When he moved on his face looked gray and drawn in the uncertain light.

"Get ready to take the Osprey and the Lucinda out next tide," he said evenly. "We'll have 'em unloaded in three hours more and ready for sea again."

He went back, and the group broke up. Pearsall, as he turned, caught a glimpse of his superior's face and wondered vaguely if "the boss" were ill.

With a fine sense of honor, Captain Jim himself had refrained from a look of word that might compromise Kate, but the memory of a chance touch of her fingers once when she passed back his change still sent a thrill over him. Since that day she had grown under his eyes to be the one desirable thing of his life.

He knew enough of Raynor to despise the man. Time and again he had said to himself that he might get actual cause for interference. Now the shattering of the dream seemed less his blunder than a crime.

A week afterward Kate's old father was struck by a falling block and laid on his bed, helpless for life. Her mother fell ill of typhoid. The superintendent saw the bloom fade from the girl's cheeks, to return only when Raynor appeared, and that in a nervous flush. He grew hot and cold alternately at the air of careless proprietorship the latter had lately assumed. Then suddenly the man announced that he was going away.

"Fank has got a ship," Captain Jim heard Kate confide to another girl. "It's a schooner running out of South Amboy for Norfolk, and the owners have promised him a raise in a few months, and then, if father and mother are able to be moved—"

Captain Jim lost the rest, but a sharp thrust went through him, whether of anguish or relief he could not have told. A month later came news of a shipwreck on the New Jersey coast.

The dispatches said openly that there were suspicious circumstances about the wreck, but as the captain, Hank Raynor, was announced as among those drowned it was impossible to do much investigating.

On that very day Kate failed to appear at the pier.

Day by day for a blank, wretched week Captain Jim faced the empty stand opposite his window. Then he went down to the waterside street and found there destitution, at once pitiful and reassuring.

"It isn't your love I am asking for, dear," he said to her gently as at the end of a half hour he found himself holding her trembling fingers and smoothing her hair. "I couldn't expect that. But if you will give me what is left, the right to take care of you and yours, God knows it will be a precious trust."

He felt himself more than ever before to be "Old Ben Bolt" as he said this.

Captain Jim had no fine phrases, but months of effort had made him a marvel of self control. He stood quite still, though every nerve was tense with longing to clasp the slim little figure to his breast. In fact, he hardly dared breathe when at last Kate dropped her head against his arm for acquiescence and broke into soft sobbing. A guess at what was in his heart, he told himself, would have frightened her out of his reach forever.

The six weeks that followed were a mixture of paradise and purgatory to him. It was hard, indeed, to play the decorous, fatherly lover when his whole soul cried out for the touch of her lips on his and every swish of her dress against him set his pulses throbbing. But he did it, and well.

His paradise proved a fool's, however. Walking along the main street one evening, with Kate on his arm, Hank Raynor's unmistakable self passed the two almost at elbow touch. There was a livid scar along the apparition's cheek. Kate did not see him, but a pang like death went through "Old Ben Bolt." The sight of that handsome, devil-may-care face seemed to sound his doom.

During the next four and twenty hours Captain Jim worked out his bitter problem. Cost what it might to his own self respect, he would tell Kate the truth as he knew it concerning Hank Raynor. He could do that if she had been his young sister, but in honor he must free her from her promise to himself.

He had thought of a way out of her financial difficulties, but it was not necessary she should know that yet or, indeed, the cost to his own heart of these last few months.

"I have come to give you back what I asked that first night, Kate, but I must tell you something it will be hard for you to bear," he said to her hoarsely as he stood in the little parlor, whose very plainness had grown dear to him.

A flush ran into Kate's cheek, but it died there, leaving a white line around her lips. "Old Ben Bolt" gripped the back of the chair in front of him.

"I suppose you have seen Raynor?" he went on.

Kate's color rushed back in a rosy flood. Her eyes drooped for an instant; then, shy, but brave, they looked straight into Captain Jim's own.

"Yes, I have seen him—and his wife," she answered, with a little laugh. "He brought her from Philadelphia. It—it was a good thing I had found out before that—that I didn't care most for him, after all, wasn't it, you dear 'Old Ben Bolt'?"

The room reeled round Captain Jim. Out of its chaos Kate's face grew flushed and smiling still, but with suspiciously luminous eyes. Then did this "Ben Bolt" give a great gasp as the truth burst upon him. He took two long strides with outstretched arms, and a second later Kate was quite lost in the big, warm embrace her dark hour had taught her was her heart's true haven.

"Taking Something For It." "Kleptomania," remarked the physician, "is a disease."

"I guess that's right," rejoined the plain clothes detective. "I've noticed that its victims are always taking something for it."—Houston Post.

In a Different Class. "I hear, Mike, that your wife has gone into society. Has she become a clubwoman yet?"

"Indeed an' she has not got into that class. She still uses a flatiron, sor."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The New Spring Hat. "What is that I see before me?" Asked the poor, bewildered man. "Is't a flowerpot inverted?"

"Or a brand new chimney pot?" "Indeed, sir, it is not!"

"What is it, then?" he queried. "And why is it so gay?"

Why decorated with such fine rigging? Oh, what is it, dear, I pray? I suppose it has some meaning. I suppose some use it bears. Is it some barbaric vase, dear? Then why isn't it in pairs?"

But she answered, oh, so coldly: "Prey, what are you driving at? Can't you see this thing of beauty? Is my stylish new spring hat?"

"And must I go with that horror?" "Yes," she said, "for it is bought!" But she shrieked as he fell prostrate. He had fainted at the thought.

Diplomatic Rewards. The rewards for conspicuous service rendered by our ambassadors and ministers are in no sense commensurate with those received by the representatives of other governments. With the other great powers, if a diplomat renders some, notably valuable service, such as preventing a destructive war or securing a treaty of vast political or commercial importance, he may be given a better post, be promoted in rank, have bestowed upon him some coveted decoration or even be made a peer of the realm. An American who performs a similar service receives official congratulations and gratifying expressions of appreciation from his government, but there the reward ceases. But there remains, of course, the best incentive to superior exertion—the satisfaction of doing one's duty.

The dance given by the young people of Franklin Grange, Saturday evening, was well attended.

There will be special meetings at the Baptist church, beginning next Sunday. Evangelist S. A. Evans, will assist Rev. C. D. McKenzie.

Oliver Lamb, who has been working for Mrs. R. C. Davis the past two months, has gone to her home on Zircon Hill, and Della Berryman of Greenwood, has taken her place.

Leon E. Truesdell, principal of the High school, spent Memorial day in Providence, R. I. Emma Leighton of the lower school, went to Westbrook for Memorial day.

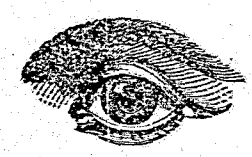

There has been talk of organizing a branch of the I. O. E. H. in town. It will be remembered that Norway has a large and flourishing organization, and now Bryant Pond bids fair to fall in a close second. Anyway the bird hunters and other hunters have become very numerous in town this spring.

The Memorial exercises on Sunday passed very pleasantly with extra music by the quartet, and an excellent sermon by Rev. C. D. McKenzie. The exercises on Monday were well attended, and the address by Rev. J. H. Little of South Paris, was very good, also the singing. Mr. Little can speak of the Civil war from personal experience. The Mackintosh band of Norway, furnished good music.

OXFORD.

Decoration Day at Oxford.

Saturday, May 19th, was opened as Decoration day at Oxford. The day itself was not one to inspire enthusiasm, as what water remained after the rain of Tuesday, continued to fall from early dawn until 10 p. m. But nothing like a little water or wind could dampen the ardor of the Veterans, the ladies of the Relief Corps, or the school children, and even the Governor himself seemed to enjoy the day, as he certainly was at his best. The band comes in for a just measure of praise. The playing was more than good, and was an incentive to keep the little folks in line, and any parade of that extent without the services of a band is more or less of a frost.

The parade started promptly on time, and headed by the band, followed by the members of T. A. Roberts Post, nearly 100 school children, teachers and members of the Relief Corps, marched through Pleasant street to King street, to the cemetery in rear of Congregational church. The Decoration day ceremonies were conducted by the officers of T. A. Roberts Post, and a detail of comrades assisted by young ladies of the school, planted flags and wreaths upon the graves of our dead comrades. At the completing of the service, the line was reformed and marched to High street, to Riverside cemetery. The services were repeated, and the line of comrades proceeded through Back, High and Pleasant streets, to starting point at Robinson hall. As the hall was reached, the band wheeled to one side, the Veterans opened ranks, and the school children marched up stairs to the dining hall. And such a dinner! Every child in that bunch had his or her appetite with them, and added by a good digestion, enjoyed themselves as only children can. Their happy laughter and bright eager faces, would cost most any despotic of the blues. When all had been served, and about 200 enjoyed the hospitality of the Ladies Relief Corps, the Veterans collected in groups for a social smoke and chat, while the children romped and played in the school yard.

At 2 p. m. the line was again formed, and marched to the Congregational church. On arrival at the church, the Veterans again opened ranks and allowed the children, as their guests, to march into and occupy the body of the church. Every seat was taken and the band rendered their selections from the gallery. The Governor was escorted to his stand under the stars and stripes and regimental colors. After a selection of the band, prayer by Rev. Mr. Fernald, and singing by the choir, Julius Fuller of East Oxford, in a neat and well timed speech, spoke of the boyhood and school days of Mr. Fernald, his manliness of character and honesty of purpose, of his journey through the house of Representatives and Senate, and finally introduced Governor Fernald to his audience. The welcome accorded Governor Fernald was genuine and spontaneous, and he promptly acknowledged it. Governor Fernald said he had great respect and admiration for the town of Oxford, and he certainly made good his remark, as he gave us the best address heard at Oxford for many years. He not only showed himself master of his subject, but he left out the large words so common among many speakers, that might plague an ordinary man. His words were well chosen, his sentences neatly constructed, his delivery clean cut, and penetrated to all parts of the house.

Among other things, the Governor reminded us that we should pay our debts to the living heroes, as well as honor the dead. He compared the greed of the wars of Europe with our war of rebellion. In the wars of the old world men fought for conquest, power and acquisitions. In the new world, while the war of 1861 to 1865, was a war of humanity, and the better man, the better the soldier. He compared the Republicanism of Maryland and Massachusetts in 1790 and 1800. He also reminded us that while the stars and stripes, and the battle flags are dear to us, the Veterans should be our pride, as they are the remnants of the actors in the great drama that made possible our free independent and liberty loving nation. If no nobles were there to share Oxford gave in the venerable struggle. He also spoke of the debt of gratitude we owe the Veterans of the Spanish war, and that all Veterans were deserving the nation's love and respect. He mentioned the numerous changes during the 19th century. That our individual liberty made every man a king, in the land of the free and the home of the brave, the most magnificent country on the face of the earth. The Governor did not miss the children and made his with them from the start. Governor Fernald was frequently applauded during the delivery of his speech.

At close of oration, the band played a selection, the choir and audience sang America, and then the Governor, standing between two flags, held an informal reception. The school children marched up and each one received a genuine hand shake and pleasant word from the Governor.

Wilbur Gammon had the honor of being the first to shake the hand of Governor Fernald. Wilbur says that if Governor Fernald is ever nominated for President, he will surely vote for him. It was a red letter day in the lives of the school children, and one they will long remember. After the children came the Ladies Relief Corps, citizens and Veterans.

Mr. Robinson kindly consented to close the mill, and the day was opened in a fitting manner. Come again, Governor Fernald.

Memorial Services.

Rev. J. H. Little of South Paris, preached the Memorial service to the G. A. R., on Sunday, May 30 at 2 p. m., in the Congregational church. Mr. Little is well known and liked in this town and is well qualified to bring out a large audience. Mr. Little is a rapid and accurate talker. His topics and ideas are introduced in a logical sequence, making his discourse agreeable and easily understood. Mr. Little's sermon was well built, substantial, and his illustrations very apt. He brought back to the Veteran's mind of the battles and incidents that occurred during the war. Mr. Little interwove the facts, need, and causes of the war, into the scriptural lesson which he introduced. The audience which completely filled the church, listened with the closest attention, and many remarked that they could have enjoyed another hour.

Concert and Ball.

Do not forget the concert and ball in Robinson hall on Wednesday evening, June 9th. The concert is furnished by the Colby orchestra, assisted by local talent, and is for the benefit of the graduating class, 1909, O. H. S.

The same orchestra will furnish music for the dance. The Colby college orchestra is one of the crack musical organizations, and the low price of admission should fill the house. No reserved seats.

Charles Durell was in town over Sunday. Alton Delano took in the ball game in Lewiston, Monday.

Everett Cook and Henry Delano, of Bates college, were home Saturday and Sunday.

W. H. Thomas of East Oxford, is at work on the extension of Winfield Gammon's store.

Mrs. Grace Seiders of Portland, spent Saturday and Monday with her mother, Mrs. Hattie Farnham.

Bertha Karanough of Portland, spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. A. J. Karanough, of High street.

Joseph Robinson came home for a brief visit with his parents, returning Monday night to Andover.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stowe of Portland, made a brief stay with Mrs. Stowe's parents, over Sunday.

Most of the young people attended the ball games, Monday, at Newry, and the Bowdoin-Bates game in Lewiston.

Mrs. Mary Hazen of Bolster's Mills, made a brief call on her many friends, Decoration day, and incidentally helped the ladies of the Relief Corps serve their dinner.

John L. Dyer, principal of the O. H. school, spent his vacation, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, at his home, at the home of his wife, Mrs. Ada R. Dyer.

The examination of pupils from the rural schools who intend to enter the High school this fall, will be held in the High school room at Oxford, on Saturday June 19th, at 2 p. m.

Robert M. Pierce, of Bates college, supplied the pulpit at the M. E. church, on Sunday, May 30. Mr. Pierce preached a wonderfully good sermon, and his talk was very interesting to his hearers. The church members were loud in their praise of his work, and Mr. Pierce will certainly be welcome at any time.

WELCHVILLE.

Frank Wilber is quite sick with la grippe.

Mrs. Fred Estes of Pittsfield is visiting her mother, Mrs. Lizzie Hall.

John McNeal was home Sunday from Hebron, where he is working.

Belle Lunt went to Portland, visiting her brother, James, on Monday.

Manuel Hen of Portland is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Everett Staples.

Ernest Boynton of Melrose, Mass., visited Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Staples.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Cloutier visited with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Carpenter, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Getchell of Bridgton is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Bet Yeaton.

Mrs. George Field and daughter went to Westbrook, Saturday, to visit relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Trieman Stone from Oufield visited their daughter, Mrs. Abbie Loveley, Sunday.

Mrs. William Salter of East Oxford died on Sunday evening of heart failure. Funeral on Tuesday at 10 o'clock. Interment at East Oxford.

Mrs. J. W. Hunting went to Lewiston to the C. M. G. hospital, Wednesday, for an operation. She is coming as well as expected up to the present writing.

HANOVER.

E. E. Howe is at the Lakes guiding a party of fishermen.

Herbert L. Russell of Portland is visiting his mother and sisters for a few days.

Jessie Howe came home Saturday for a few days' rest, returning to her work at West Bethel Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Trask and little son, Mr. and Mrs. Ardel Hall and Douglas Hall of Rumford spent the week end at their cottage at Howard's pond.

A party from Norway, including Mr. and Mrs. George I. Cummings and son, Charles, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Welch and two sons spent several days at Camp Bruin, recently.

Mrs. C. M. Richardson and Mrs. Emily Frost went to Boston last week, for a few weeks' visit with relatives and friends. They were accompanied by Mrs. Charles Mason, who, after a short stay in Boston, will go on to Prince Edward Island where she will spend several weeks with a sister.

The fishing has been very good at Howard's pond this past week. Several large trout and salmon have been taken by fishermen at Indian Rock Camp; the Camp Bruin party caught five large salmon and two good-sized trout; Herbert Russell, in a few hours' fishing, landed a salmon and a trout that weighed each weigh 4 pounds; but perhaps the proudest of all the fishermen of the week is Master Paul Staples, who caught a 4 1/2 pound salmon.

ALBANY.

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Observance of Memorial Day.

The observance of Memorial Day for decorating the graves of our deceased soldiers was under the direction of J. M. Knight Woman's Relief Corps, North Waterford, several comrades of Leppien Post of East Stoneham and resident G. A. R. comrades of South Waterford assisting.

At an early hour on Saturday, May 29, the Relief Corps and G. A. R. comrades solemnized the service of decoration at the cemetery in North Waterford, in which they were attended by many citizens of that section of the town. At the close of the ceremonies a large detachment of the corps accompanied by several comrades proceeded in carriages to the South village arriving about 12 o'clock, where they were met by a committee of resident comrades and ladies consisting of W. W. Watsof of Harry Post, Norway, and Mrs. Watson; George H. Billings of Farragut Post, Bridgton, and Mrs. Billings; Granville Fernald of John A. Logan Post, Harrison; John Atherton and Bessie Hamlin, and invited to the shelter of Grange hall as it was constantly threatening to rain till past the noon hour. In the dining hall of the Grange the visiting guests and their friends of the local committee joined in the delights of a sumptuous picnic dinner, the company being as follows: Mrs. Martha H. Black, President; M. M. Knight W. R. C., and official staff: Mrs. Grace Elliott, S. V. P.; Mrs. Myra M. Patrick, Treas.; Mrs. Lizzie Jewett, Com.; Mrs. Caroline Plummer, A. C.; Mrs. Emily Paige, Mrs. Helen Nason, Mrs. May Rice, Gertrude Cobb, Guard; Susie Littlefield, Minnie McKean, Mrs. Bickford and Mrs. Lilla Rice of Custer W. R. C. of Lewiston; Stephen McAllister, Commander of Leppien Post, and Comrades Henry Plummer, Silas McKean and M. W. Bickford of Post 40, Dept. of Mass., of G. A. R.

At 1.30 p. m. a procession was formed at the hall and under the escort of the W. R. C. proceeded by its color guard, the decorating committee of comrades marched to Elmvale cemetery and held a solemn service according to the Rituals of the Grand Army of the Republic. Rev. G. W. Sias, resident pastor, delivered a brief address upon the subject of the patriotic services of the American soldier in all wars, and the blessings of the United States to the people of the world as citizens. After the decoration of graves, a brief call to order at the formal exercises of the day, consisting of reading of President Lincoln's Gettysburg address by Comrade Granville Fernald and singing America by all. On the return to the hall as the visiting guests were ready to depart on another tour of decoration at the Bissetown cemetery, there was a cordial interchange of expressions of thanks for mutual courtesy and singing America for the patriotic spirit evinced by the members of J. M. Knight W. R. C. on this, their first public memorial service in decoration with flags and flowers the resting places of the soldier dead.

Memorial Service, May 30, was appropriately observed by preaching a memorial discourse by pastor G. W. Sias, on the theme, "The call of our patriot dead." Select music by the choir: "Doxology"; Chorus of Liberty, "Nagoli"; "The March of the Gray"; "Gather the Cherished Ones, Pollock"; America.

The ponds were perceptibly raised by the last week's rain storm.

Frank Willard, after partially recovering from a late period of sickness, is again prostrated and confined to his bed by illness.

Helen and Marguerite Briggs of Pittsford, Pa., are guests for the summer at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Noble. They are granddaughters of the late John C. Gerry of this village.

HARRISON.

Memorial Day.

The Memorial day exercises were much enjoyed by all. The John A. Logan Post school children and citizens marched from the hall, headed by the Woodmen's band from Bridgton to the cemetery where appropriate exercises were held and graves decorated. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the procession proceeded to the Congregational church where the following program was listened to with much interest:

We old boys..... The Mozart Male Quartet Prayer..... Rev. C. N. Davis Heedless..... Rev. C. N. Davis Duet, Every man was a volunteer.....

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Flint of Lincoln's address at Genesee, N. Y. Reading, Rest, soldier, rest..... Arthur Libby..... Mrs. George Marr, North Bridgton Memorial Address..... Prof. H. G. Clement Singing, America..... Led by quartet Benediction..... Rev. Mr. Davis

The quartet was composed of Walter Dudley, 1st tenor; George Flint, 2d tenor; Lincoln M. Burnham, 1st bass; Mr. Doughty, 2d bass. The principal feature of this singing was the very interesting Memorial address by Prof. H. G. Clement, the principal of Bridgton academy.
